Why certify?

Earning a certification demonstrates to employers that you are committed to the profession and that you are qualified with the practical job skills and technical know-how that patients expect and deserve. Many employers want to hire staff who are already certified and may prefer certification through a not-for-profit professional society like AMT.

Why certify through AMT?

We're all about you

AMT is the professional association for allied health. Certification through AMT brings you a recognized credential from an accredited agency.

You're one of us

Once you pass the certification exam and complete training, you automatically become a member of both the national and local state society. And, AMT makes achieving and maintaining certification affordable. It's part of our mission-because we're all about you.
